"The biggest thing that modeling has taught me is how to have thicker skin and accept criticism and rejection."

a matter of persistence and humility, as you can't truly fail until you give up.

There are always two sides of a coin and you have seen both lifestyles - of poverty and fame. How have your life experiences shaped you as an individual?

Ever since the beginning my mother was always my solid rock, and I could not be more grateful to her for my upbringing. Even though, I come from a humble background, it has given me a better and more insightful perspective of the world around me. And I truly believe that our life experiences mold our personal character, some experiences break us, some make us stronger and
